Tyndall NCOA renamed after first CMSAF

CHRISY CUTTITA
325th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Tyndall's NCO Academy was renamed Wednesday to honor the first Chief Master Sergeant of the Air Force.

The Paul W. Airey NCO Academy dedication ceremony will be remembered as the second greatest thing to happen in the retired chief's professional life, said Chief Airey, only because becoming Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force will always be first, he said.

"I am proud and a little in awe," said Chief Airey. "I will never let you down and I'm going to do my best to live up to this."

For years the academy hoped they could rename their institution after the chief who has been involved with professional development at Tyndall since he retired here in 1970.

"Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force Airey is a great hero, a trailblazer for the enlisted corps and a great, humble man," said Chief Master Sgt. Thomas Schwenk, NCOA commandant, to a crowd of active and retired military, families, local community leaders and Wednesday's graduating NCOA class.

The presiding officer for the dedication was Col. Albert John Bowley, Jr., commander of the College for Enlisted Professional Military Education, Maxwell AFB, Gunter Annex, Ala.

"We celebrate a life well-lived," said Colonel Bowley. "We honor an Air Force hero, aerial gunner, former prisoner of war (in WWII), Korean War veteran and Legion of Merit recipient."

Words of wisdom

Retired Chief Master Sgt. of the Air Force Gerald Murray spoke with Tyndall Airmen Tuesday about a variety of current issues including leadership priorities, force shaping, the impact of one's voice and his appreciation of all Airmen and their contributions to the Air Force.

Identify this ...

Can you identify this object? If so, send an e-mail to editor@tyndall.af.mil with "Identify this" in the subject line.

Three correct entries will be chosen at random and drawn from a hat to determine the final winner. The prize can be claimed at the Public Affairs office. Roger Lachance, 325th Maintenance Group, correctly guessed the Dec. 8 "Identify This" as a maintenance stand platform. Congratulations Mr. Lachance, come claim your prize!

Making the holiday season spirit last longer

CHAPLAIN (COL.) RICHARD JOHNSON
U.S. Joint Forces Command

NORFOLK, Va. (AFP)—Except for the feeding frenzy that can occur when last minute shoppers compete for the last half-dozen “Bouncing Tiggers” known to exist in the Western world, the holiday period is generally a time of widespread friendliness, hope, and cheer.

There is a pervasive attitude of peace, love and joy that fills the hearts of most people. Have you ever noticed that people are more friendly, cooperative and helpful during the holidays?

Typically, however, this helpful and loving attitude seems to quickly disappear right after the holidays. Why does the spirit of the holidays seem to disappear when the last of the holiday cookies are gone? Is there a secret ingredient in the festive foods that makes us love, accept and cooperate with our fellow human beings?

The secret ingredient is in us.

The real answer lies in the fact that the holidays are also a time for remembering the deepest truths of humankind. All of the major religions of the world celebrate the holidays and the New Year as a time of reflection and rededication. The holidays are a time for remembering and rejoicing because of the many blessings that we all have received from God. They are also a time for reaffirming the common bonds and struggles of humankind. The holidays bring us closer to God, and therefore closer to each other.

Dinners served at the homeless shelters, gifts given to the needy and to orphans, letters written to lonely military members, visits made to nursing homes and past hurts that are forgiven and forgotten are hallmarks of the holiday season because they are reminders that we all share the same needs, hopes, desires, and dreams. We all live under the same sun, breathe the same air and drink the same water. Everyone desires love, companionship, acceptance and recognition. There is an undeniable bond that links us all.

Let the core values of the holiday linger in your lives.

People frequently ask why the holiday spirit can't continue throughout the entire year. The truth is it could! If the special feelings of the holiday season are to continue past the time when the holiday decorations have come down, then we must continually and repeatedly remind ourselves of the common ties and desires that we share. We must continually draw closer to our God -- which will draw us closer to all humankind.

This holiday season, when we worship at our respective houses of worship, remember that the “core values” of the holiday season ... those that we so deeply enjoy at this time of year, such as the “golden rule,” the desire for true peace, and the love of fellow human beings ... are not simply meant to be practiced only during the holidays! Live the spirit! Let the light of the holidays shine on in your lives! May God richly bless you and yours during this holiday season.

Festival of lights begins today at sundown

MAJ. SUSAN A. ROMANO
325th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Hanukkah, the Jewish festival of lights, is an eight-day festival that occurs on the twenty-fifth day of the Jewish month of Kislev and begins today at sundown.

Its history can be traced more than two thousand years ago, commemorating the Maccabees victory over the Syrians. The victory itself was considered a miracle, and Jewish legend explains that once the Temple Mount in Jerusalem had been reclaimed, it had to be rededicated, but there was only one jar of sacramental oil – enough for just one day. Miraculously, the oil burned for eight days, thus the eight days of Hanukkah.

Hanukkah, which means rededication, is a time for Jewish families to focus attention on matters affecting Jewish education of children. Its religious significance is far less than other Jewish holidays such as Passover, Yom Kippur and Rosh Hashanah, but the religious observance of Hanukkah comes at the lighting of the candles on the menorah. A menorah is a candelabrum that holds nine candles – one for each night plus a shammas. The shammas, which translates into servant, is used to light the other eight candles and is usually higher than the others in the menorah.

Once the shammas is lit, a prayer is recited as the first candle is lit. Each night another candle is lit until all eight candles are burning on the eighth night of Hanukkah.

Hanukkah is probably one of the best-known Jewish holidays, not because of any great religious significance, but because of its proximity to Christmas and its tradition of exchanging gifts. It is also a time for preparing delicious foods such as potato latkes (pancakes) and sufganiot (jelly donuts).

Another tradition is playing with a dreidel. A dreidel is a square top with four Hebrew letters on them. Children play with matchsticks, candy, pennies, or gelt (chocolate coins). Each letter signifies an action the players must take. The Hebrew letters--Nun, Gimmel, Heh and Shin – have their roots in the Hebrew phrase, “Nes gadol haya sham,” which means a great miracle happened there. Some believe it stands for the Yiddish words, nit (nothing), gantz (all), halb (half) and shtell (put), which are actually the rules of the game. If a player spins Nun, nothing happens. If a player spins Gimmel, the spinner takes all. If Heh is spun, the player takes half. And if Shin appears, all the players must ante up.

Happy Hanukkah, enjoy the latkes, and here's to winning a lot of gelt!

The saying goes, “third time’s a charm,” but not in Senior Airman Wallis Payano’s case.

The second time she auditioned for Tops in Blue proved life-changing for the 81st Range Control Squadron interface control technician.

“I didn’t make it last time, so I didn’t feel I would make it this time,” said Airman Payano.

However, those feeling were put aside during a recent commander’s call in her squadron when her commander gave her the news she had been selected as a Tops in Blue vocalist.

“I cried when I saw a certificate with ‘Tops in Blue’ on it in my commander’s hand,” said Airman Payano. “My squadron is so supportive and proud of me.”

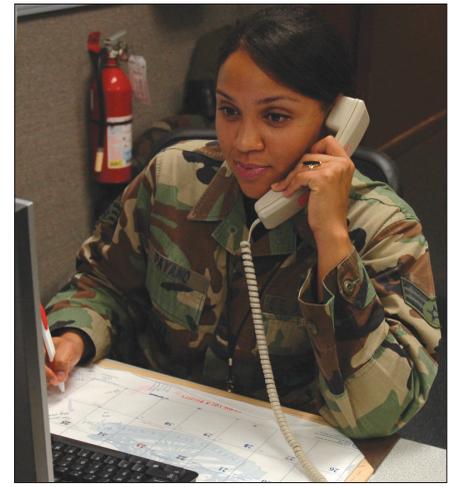

“She is an easy person to get excited for,” said Lt. Col. Barbara Omstead, 81st RCS commander. “I hear her singing in the hall all the time. We are most proud of her. I think Tops in Blue will open her eyes to the rest of the Air Force and build her confidence in herself and others.”

“I love singing. I got into it when I joined junior high choir,” said Airman Payano.

She sings a variety of music such as gospel and rhythm and blues, but her favorite is Spanish.

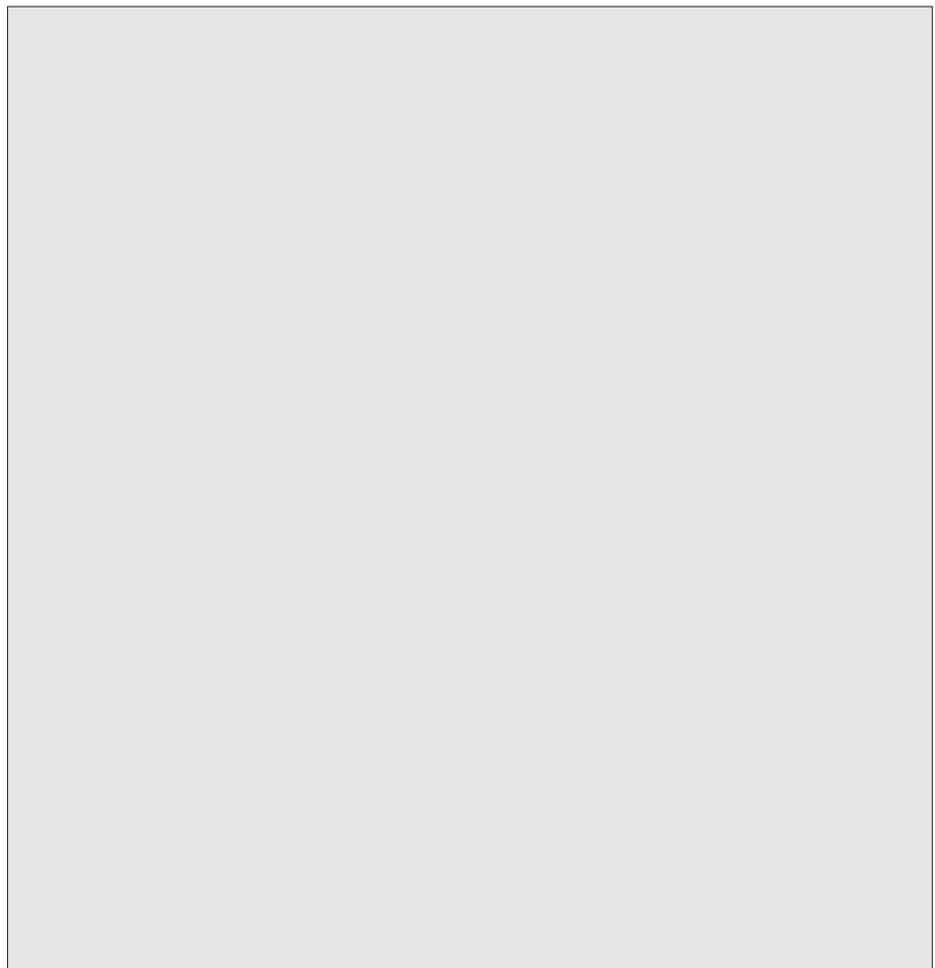

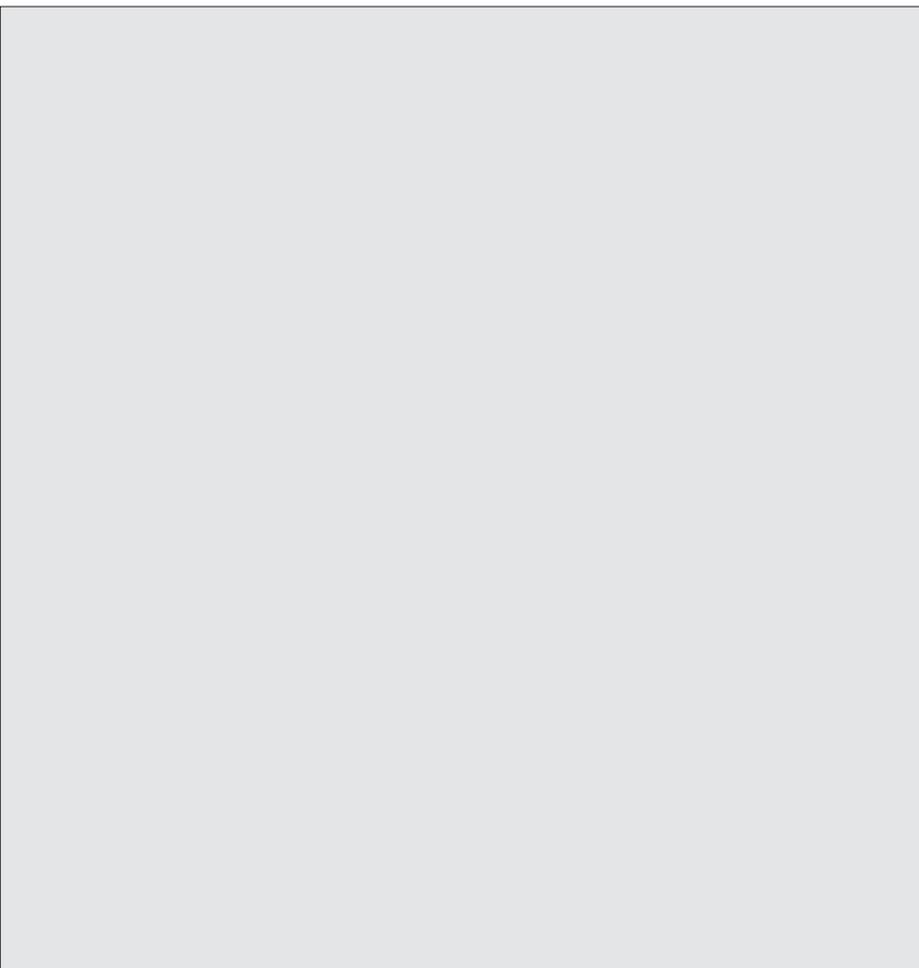

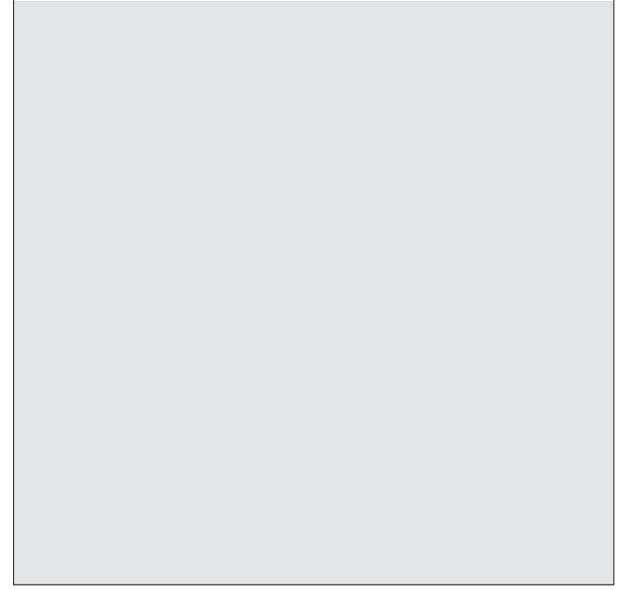

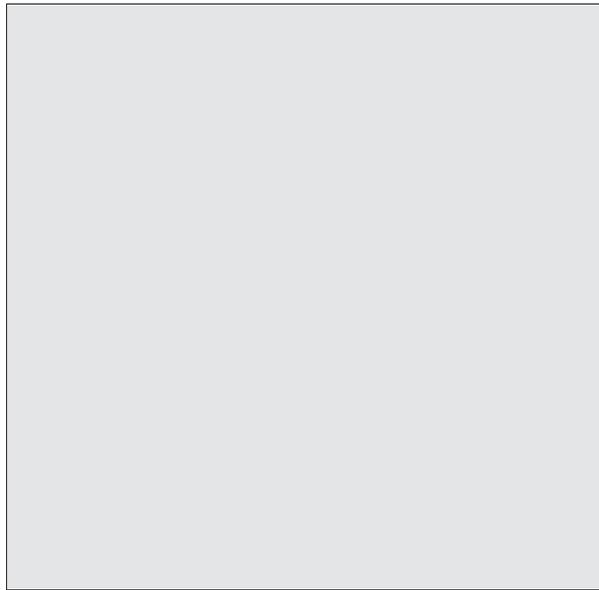

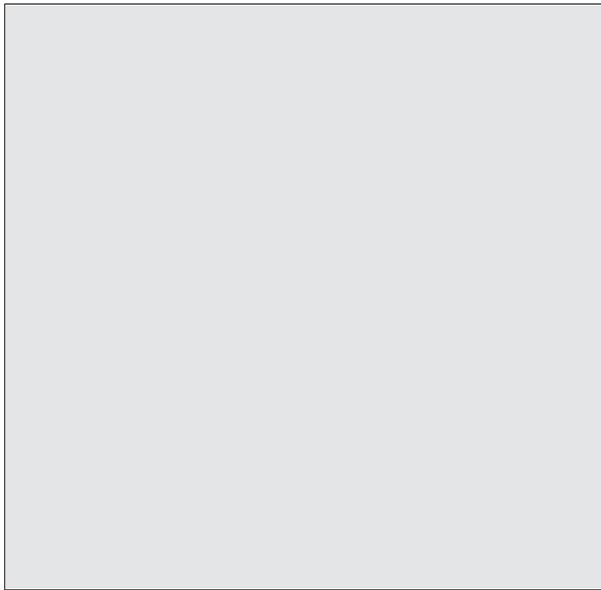

“It’s in my blood,” said Airman Payano, whose parents are from the Dominican Republic. “I grew up with it.”

Chief Airey is someone we all know and admire.”

The ceremony left students feeling honored and privileged to be part of the historic event.

Chief Airey also wanted to leave the class with a quote he created for the new Air Force memorial in Washington.

“When I think of the enlisted force, I think of dedication, determination, loyalty and valor,” said the retired chief.

The tradition of excellence continues because of the chief and other military leaders.

“How you live your life inspires your country,” Colonel Bowley said to Chief Airey during the colonel’s ceremonial speech. “We educate to inspire and develop the enlisted core. We’ve nailed our vision and mission

THE MISSION OF THE UNITED STATES AIR FORCE IS TO DELIVER SOVEREIGN OPTIONS FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE UNITED STATES OF AMERICA AND ITS GLOBAL INTERESTS — TO FLY AND FIGHT IN AIR, SPACE AND CYBERSPACE

1st FS, 1st AMU wraps up history of training Eagle pilots to fly

STAFF SGT. STACEY HAGA
325th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

Training an F-15 Eagle pilot is not a small feat.

It takes many people, many hours, many resources and a lot of coordination.

The 1st Fighter Squadron and 1st Aircraft Maintenance Unit have been dedicated to the mission of training F-15 pilots, and have done so very successfully.

The 1st FS was reactivated here as a training squadron in 1984 after 25 years of inactivation. The 1st FS, then called the 1st Tactical Fighter Training Squadron, was reactivated Jan. 1, 1984 as part of the 325th Tactical Training Wing. The squadron's mission then was to train world-class Eagle pilots and prepare them for operational duty world-wide, which is the mission they continue to accomplish today. In 1991, the operations and maintenance functions of the 1st TFTS joined to form a combined squadron and was renamed the 1st Fighter Squadron.

Today, the squadron and unit were inactivated again to meet the needs of the ever evolving Air Force, and they do so leaving behind a legacy of safe and effective training for Air Force Eagle pilots.

"As of 'end-of-flying' Dec. 6, we have safely flown 109,077 sorties and 143,741 hours," said Capt. Robert Anson, 1st Aircraft Maintenance Unit officer in charge.

During those hours, the 1st FS trained approximately 670 pilots.

"To get there, the 1st AMU provided safe and reliable aircraft to meet the flying training mission," said Chief Master Sgt. Jody Reed, 1st AMU NCO in charge.

"The maintainers of the 1st AMU remained focused on the training mission," said Lt. Col. Malcolm Kemeny, 1st FS operations officer. "They surpassed every goal during my tenure as operations officer. We would not have enjoyed the success we had without their dedicated support."

1st Lt. Gary Wallace, the last student pilot to fly in the 1st FS, prepares for taxi to the runway.

Steve Wallace

Senior Airman Jay Ruark and Senior Airman Nathan Patrick, 1st AMU crew chiefs, prepare an F-15 for the last 1st FS training mission.

Successful training is not accomplished solely by the Airmen turning wrenches, nor is it accomplished only by those flying the jets. It comes from a good working relationship between the two elements, said Lt. Col. George Menker, 1st FS commander.

"The working relationship between the fighter squadron and AMU is exceptional," said Captain Anson. "Which leads to balancing operational needs with aircraft maintenance requirements."

"The greatest asset of the 1st FS is its people," said Colonel Kemeny. "I have never seen such an exuberant 'can do' attitude."

The hard work and commitment invested in the mission by Airmen in the 1st FS and 1st AMU are proven by the number of pilots trained. It's also made apparent by the numerous decorations, awards and plaques that cover the walls of both units.

The 1st FS received several honors, such as earning the Air Force Maintenance Effectiveness Award for 1998, Nineteenth Air Force Top Operations Squadron of the Year for 1998 and 325th Fighter Wing Fighter Squadron of the Year for 1995, 1997 and 1998. Other notable accomplishments include receiving the U. S. Air Force Air Flight Safety of the Year award for 2002, as well as recognition for best intelligence mission report.

The 1st AMU has received the 325th Fighter Wing AMU of the Year award for 2003 and 2004, and has won numerous Turkey Shoot competitions over the years. They even continued their success into their final days by winning AMU of the Quarter for the third time this year.

More important than awards and accolades, and above any individual member, the collective team of Airmen assigned to the 1st FS and 1st AMU will together create the legacy of the Fightin' Furies.

AIRMAN GLENN MOORE 325th Fighter Wing Public Affairs

The 2006 Air Education and Training Command Air Force medical service annual awards have been announced and the medical clinic members here made a strong showing.

They won ten awards this year at the AETC level and are now competing at the Air Force level.

"It really spotlights the team and the work they have done," said Col. George Nicolas, 325th Medical Group commander. "I'm very proud of the work everyone has put in. The awards recognize everyone, including a lot of the people 'down in the trenches.'"

AETC has more medical facilities than any other command. This makes the competition much tougher and the process for the clinic here selecting who should be submitted for awards harder.

"When we look for a person to submit for an award, we look for someone who is well rounded," said Colonel Nicolas. "We need people who can do all things really well, rather than excelling in one area."

Winning the awards has also caused other clinics to ask how our clinic here did so well.

"We have already had other clinics call to see how we won all our awards," said Colonel Nicolas. "It goes to show how well everyone works together to achieve this goal."

Some would think the mixed environment of military and civilian could be difficult at times, but not for the clinic here.

"We actually have more civilians than military working in the clinic right now," said Colonel Nicolas. "This team is a really nice blend of civilian and military. Everyone gets along and works together extremely well."

The hard work paid off in the end for the medical clinic as they have received recognition for their dedication to excellence.

The awards won by the medical clinic are as follows:

OSS takes a lickin', keeps on tickin'

PIGSKIN PROGNOSTICATOR

From the land of mediocrity

'Amazing' is about the only word I can think of after last weekend. Four records were broken last week and two more players inched closer to records.

One prominent rushing record was broken by San Diego running back Ladainian Tomlinson. Tomlinson now has the most touchdowns in season with 29. He already broke the record for most touchdowns in a six-game span earlier this season, became the first Charger with eight 100-yard rushing games in a row and it doesn't look like he will stop there.

Tomlinson is one touchdown away from tying the record for most rushing touchdowns in one season and two points away from tying Green Bay multi-positioned Paul Hornburg's record of 176 total points in a season.

Not a bad year and I'm sure

Atlanta is kicking themselves for deciding to trade draft picks with San Diego. Atlanta ended up taking quarterback Michael Vick with the first overall pick and San Diego picked Tomlinson third overall. Vick isn't bad, but he isn't vying for the title of the greatest quarterback ever, and Tomlinson definitely has to be mentioned in the discussion of all-time great running backs.

Another record was broken by Carolina quarterback Chris Weinke. Weinke threw for 423 yards – on 64 attempts might I add – breaking the team record of passing yards in a game. I'm still not sure if I'm more stunned by the amount of yards Weinke threw for or the fact Carolina actually let the former Heisman trophy winner throw the ball one time, let alone 64 times.

A team who isn't setting any records this year, at least any you want to be known for, is OSS. I was wondering how it felt being out of the Super Prog contention because I've never really had that feeling.

"The only Super Prog that matters is the NCAA Super Prog in which my beloved Buckeyes will be victorious!" said OSS picker Mark Rivers.

Well, that's good he's rooting for amateurs and not professionals; he'll fit right in. Since he is just an amateur, I asked him if he would still participate in the Pig Prog next year after I've beat him so badly this year.

"But of course. It's just like being a first sergeant," said Rivers. "Where else can you take a beating everyday and still love coming to work?"

Well, I'm glad he can cope with being behind me in the standings so well. I just hope the rest of you can do the same!

Now let's get out there and watch some football!

95th FS helps boy on road to recovery

Visiting the 95th Fighter Squadron on Dec. 7 helped Toby Crabtree, 5, Pilot for a Day, cope with his illness.

This was the 95th FS's fourth time inducting a child as their special guest in their Pilot for a Day program. Before he stepped into the simulator, he had the opportunity to meet the commander, participate in a step brief with pilots and tested for uniform and mask fittings.

Toby has viral hepatitis. Doctors aren't sure what caused his condition. He has undergone two liver biopsies and he may need to have another. Also, his doctor's put him on steroids six months ago to reduce inflammation of his liver.

Toby still is taking the steroids, but possibly could stop taking them in about four weeks. After his last biopsy, doctors said everything is almost back to normal.

"When he found out he would be going (to the 95th FS) it gave him something to look forward to and kept him really excited," said Staff Sgt. Brian Crabtree,

Superheroes and AAFES join forces for fourth military-only marvel comic

DALLAS – Just in time for the holiday season, Marvel Comics’ “The New Avengers” and the Army & Air Force Exchange Service have teamed up once again to bring troops stationed around the world another free, military-exclusive comic book.

Scheduled to arrive in continental U.S. exchanges Wednesday and overseas, including the 53 BX/PX facilities throughout Operations Enduring and Iraqi Freedom, shortly thereafter, “The New Avengers; Letters Home” is the fourth installment of the military-only comic book series.

“Due to their limited availability, collectors have historically shown great interest in these special AAFES/Marvel Comics editions,” said Col. Max Baker, AAFES chief of staff. “If the past is any indicator, ‘The New Avenger; Letters Home’ issue should go quickly.”

Available exclusively at AAFES, the newest issue once again features Marvel’s superhero Captain America, who, because his regular supporting cast is away for the holidays, is joined by Silver Surfer, Ghost Rider and special guest The Punisher.

When Hydra takes over a military communications satellite, the superheroes spring into action to ensure troops email messages to loved ones make their way home.

Because of the highly collectible nature and the anticipated demand for the 36-page comic, AAFES officials advise that “The New Avengers; Letters Home” is available on a first-come, first-served basis.

On Jan. 15, Airman Payano will start her year tour with Tops in Blue, often working 16-18 hour days assembling and breaking down the stage, practicing and performing. She understands the hard work that lies ahead, but looks forward to the chance to do what she enjoys.

"I love it and I am willing to give it my all," she said.

She hopes her leadership skills, spirit and humor will be an asset to the group during the tour.

"She is a pure and real person," said Colonel Omstead of Airman Payano. "She has tremendous energy, beautiful voice and moral values. She displays amazing faith in other Airmen, God and the Air Force."

Airman Payano counts it a blessing and privilege to share her love of music with others.

"It's wonderful to entertain others and be a reminder to others of why we serve," she said. "I plan to do the best I can in Tops in Blue. I want to touch people when they are away from home. They need that."

Airman Payano also wants to use this opportunity to mentor and teach others about music.

"Music is a great outlet and a great way to find one's self and connect with others," she said.

Toby's father. "The experience was really good for him to. He loved it; the pilots treated him like 'one of the guys.'"

"The 95th FS did great and made everyone feel welcome," said Tiffanie Crabtree, Toby's mother. "No one felt out of place and even though Toby isn't big on attention, he really enjoyed it and it gave him more confidence."

Even though the squadron has a very busy training schedule, the commander views this program as a great way to give back to the community and share their mission.

"There are many who are not as fortunate and through what ever means we can provide, comfort or a fun experience, we can give back," said Colonel Routt. "Through this program, I hope to paint a good picture of the 95th FS, the 325th Fighter Wing and the Air Force. We can tell the Air Force story to the community."

When we asked his mother what part of the day he enjoyed the most, she was quick and confident in her response.

"Toby enjoyed two videos that Capt. Chris Ridlon, 95th FS instructor pilot, played. One had the song "Where Eagles Fly" and there were eagles throughout the video," said Ms. Crabtree. "Toby really loves eagles so Captain Ridlon made a copy of the DVD so he could take it home."

"Two other things Toby really liked was the flight suit and the coin the commander gave him," said Ms. Crabtree. "He carries it everywhere with him and coin checks everybody now."

As the 95th FS successfully completed its fourth Pilot for a Day, they can be sure that it has made a difference in another child's life.
